

Wander in Wonder: WALKING MEDITATION

- Go outside for a walk.
- As you inhale, receive the Earth's support through your entire body, from the soles of your feet to the crown of your head.
- As you exhale, thank the Earth for supporting you.
- Find a threshold on the land before you (e.g., a twig lying across the path).
- When you cross this threshold, wander in wonder:
 - What do I see?
 - What do I hear?
 - What do I smell?
 - What do I touch?
 - What do I taste?
 - What do I feel?
 - What do I wonder?
 - What do I intuit?
- As you walk, let your awareness to be drawn to an Earth companion (e.g., an oak, a hawk, a creek, a rock).
- Pause to experience this Earth companion.
- Release any expectations in this gentle inquiry, making space for surprise:
 - What do you notice about this Earth companion?
 - What do you feel in the presence of this Earth companion?
 - What might you share with this Earth companion?
 - What might this Earth companion share with you?
- Thank the Earth companion for your time together.
- Return to your threshold.
- Before you cross over, inhale, receiving the gifts of your journey.
- As you cross over, exhale, letting these gifts live through you.
- Thank the Earth for your journey and for supporting your connection with the Earth companion.
- In your journal, write a reflection on your walking meditation:
 - What happened during my walking meditation?
 - What did I feel at the beginning of my walking meditation?
 - What do I feel now?
 - What is my next step?
